

CHOREOGRAPHY OF SPACES

Sangeetha Mayur
Architect and interior designer

HOUSE PROUD

How many of us look to bring nature inside? Or to enjoy an enchanting view of the garden as many times as possible? When you live in a place where the weather is perfect for it, there is nothing like having architectural and landscape features that allow your indoor living to expand and blend with the outdoor space. Here, we talk about five beautiful design thoughts that can transform and whisk in the interiors of your home with your exteriors.

Style it with accessories

By keeping the front and back gardens at the same level as the living area, you can create one huge living space that doubles in size. Sliding doors and mobile partitions on wheels, large glazed fronts can be arranged coherently to create different layouts for living and open plan layouts.

A large overhang or a canopy with seating and chill out spaces as an intermediate area between the ins and the out - means that even on a rainy day, you can live practically without walls.

Customise a courtyard

The central parts of homes tend to be the darkest, least enjoyable spaces. A "courtyard" becomes a focal point of a home from the kitchen, dining, and living rooms. A double height court, not only helps bring daylight into the ground floor but also visually connects the upper levels of the house in one seamless design.

An open-to-the-sky interior courtyard or garden can be enjoyed from different spaces and brighten things up by letting in nature and fresh air.

Create a backyard

It is all about entertaining. Create a lot of gathering spaces from your dining and open kitchen which spills out onto your backyard deck. Lots of counter spaces and plenty of seating, encouraged by using privacy and green to this outdoor space. A seating area that blends seamlessly into the surrounding garden helps to take full advantage of the outdoors.

Courtesy: Archiscape

Courtesy: Archiscape

Blend in a terrace garden

An indoor pool, a rooftop deck bound in by a sturdy glass railing provides the perfect setting for a luxurious getaway feel. Spaces for intimate and lavish entertaining, plenty of seating and warm lights, make the terrace area an ideal place to enjoy an evening. Flamboyant exterior stairs can be further integrated into the terrace connecting and embracing the different levels of the house as one cohesive home.

Whether it is a porch, pool, alfresco or simply a garden - Creating efficient and resourceful space is valuable, but for us, places that offer visual and spatial continuity with nature is as much important. Ultimately, it is all about living harmoniously with nature.

large panes of glass and sliding doors to bridge the exterior and interior make it a good space for a weekend barbecue and/or party.

Add a cosy retreat

Speckled sunlight through well positioned skylights, reclaimed wood floors and rustic walls give the master bedroom a warm, peaceful feel. Huge sliding glass doors to open onto a deck or balcony with potted plants and grass create the much required airiness with